Galante Vineyard Celebrates First Commercial Wine Release

By Elizabeth Cowley

Jack Galante and several hundred guests celebrated the first commercial release of Galante Vineyards wine on August 10 at the Galante Vineyard in Cachagua. A picnic lunch, music, and lots of wine was enjoyed by all and a portion of the proceeds will benefit the Cachagua Community Center.

Tom Little Bear Nason sang and drummed as members of the Esselen Indian Tribe performed traditional Esselen dances. Shortly thereafter the power went out from Canada to Mexico but with some creative engineering and help from the Cachagua Volunteer Fire Department a generator was hooked up in time for Jack's long time friend and county

Rancho San Carlos Referendum to be Decided Aug 20

By Elizabeth Cowley

The Rancho San Carlos development may be brought to the voters in November if Superior Court Judge Harkjoon Paik qualifies an additional 284 referendum petition signatures on August 20. On August 8, Judge Paik validated 29 signatures bringing the Rancho San Carlos referendum petition down to 284 signatures short of qualifying for the ballot. The lawsuit filed by Noel Mapstead and Holly Keifer currently questions the disqualification of over one thousand signatures and Paik repeatedly said that under the law he must "resolve all doubts in favor of the power of referendum."

Of the 29 signatures Paik validated on August 8, Tony Anchondo of the Monterey County Elections Department conceded that about 10 of them were disqualified in error. Judge Paik said he will rule on the remaining thousand or so questionably disqualified signatures at the August 20 hearing.

Many signatures were disqualified due to a lack of strict compliance with the elections code for reasons including using a PO Box instead of a residential address, an incorrect date by the petition circulator, typing information, or an incompletely filled out declaration of petitioner. Keifer's attorney, Zan Henson, co-plaintiff Noel Mapstead, Rancho San Carlos attorneys Brian Finnegan and James Parrinello and Assistant County Council Lee Blankenship argued at length over what constitutes adequate compliance with the elections code. Judge Paik said "The elections code is not to hinder, but to encourage more participation in the spirit of democracy."

Paik indicated that he will probably rule in favor of qualifying 270 music great Jerry Jeff Walker to sing love ballads such as "I Like My Women a Bit Trashy" and other country tunes. Although it had to be over 100 degrees, Jerry Jeff Walker inspired folks to cut the rug - or in this case the rose petal covered grass.

The Galante family has operated the Cachagua homestead as a cattle ranch since 1969 and Jack Galante said of his foray into wine making "We began growing grapes and selling them to other wineries in 1983, which we still do, but after years of experimenting we were ready to produce wine for our own label."

The next Galante Vineyards event is the "Annual Days of Wine and Roses" on September 21. For more information about Galante Vineyards wine or upcoming events call 1-800-GALANTE.

OBITUARIESLOREN E. SMITH

Loren E. Smith, an 18 year resident of Carmel Valley, died at the age of 87 on August 7, 1996.

Born in Chino, California, Mr. Smith lived in Monterey County for 80 years. He worked as a bank manager for the Bank of America.

He was an honorary life member of the Carmel Valley Rotary Club.

Survivors are his wife, Ruth L. Smith of Carmel Valley, sons Loren L. Smith of San Jose, Richard G. Smith of Orange, Stanley D. Smith of River Pines, daughter Marilyn Smith Raynes of Carmel Valley, sisters Mayme Fields of Greenfield, Marian Smith of Pacific Grove, 12 grandchildren and 10 great grandchildren.

Interment in Mission Memorial Park was under the direction of The Paul Mortuary.

signatures which were disqualified because the petition circulator put the wrong date on the form. Paik said he did not want to punish those who signed the referendum and wanted to participate because the petition circulator made a clerical error.

Paik also allowed the inclusion of an additional 1,240 signatures to the lawsuit which were disqualified because the Elections Department said they were not registered voters. Henson randomly checked a couple of these signatures and found that one was indeed a registered voter and said "these are the most disturbing of all of them."

Rancho San Carlos attempted to derail the lawsuit in July by offering Noel Mapstead a personal financial settlement in exchange for environmental concessions and his dropping the lawsuit. Some opponents of the Rancho San Carlos development accused Mapstead of "environmental treason" and being "a sellout." Settlement negotiations were abandoned on July 29 when Judge Paik allowed Holly Keifer to intervene as a plaintiff in the lawsuit.

The referendum to rescind the Board of Supervisors February 1996 approval of the Rancho San Carlos development has been litigated from the onset. On March 1 Mapstead successfully obtained a 5 foot separation limit between petition circulators and Rancho San Carlos supporters but lost a lawsuit on May 8 claiming a violation of the 5 foot limit, although Judge Silver did express concern about the behavior of Ranch supporters.

If Judge Paik qualifies an additional 284 signatures at the August 20 hearing the Rancho San Carlos development will go to a public vote in November unless Rancho San Carlos appeals. The Rancho San Carlos project includes 350 residential lots, 150 hotel rooms, stores, offices and a golf course on 20,000 acres. 18,000 acres are classified as a preserve to be managed by a non-profit organization.

The referendum petition drive was initiated because opponents of the project were concerned that the Rancho San Carlos development would harm the Carmel Valley environment. Concerns included water supply, increased traffic congestion, the proposed traffic light on Carmel Valley Road and insufficient open space. Opponents contend that while 18,000 acres are classified as a preserve the development is not sufficiently clustered as only 2,000 acres of the 20,000 acre project will be more than 1,000 feet away from man made improvements.

Heartstrings, an acoustic music ensemble, will be the featured artists at the third annual "Great Bowls of Fire" Chili Cook-Off on Monday, September 23, 5 to 8 p.m., at the Holman Ranch, just east of Carmel Valley Village. The popular event is sponsored by the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce.

Heartstrings is an ensemble of five women playing original arrangements of traditional and contemporary Irish tunes, as well as European waltzes and old-time American fiddle tunes. The musicians are Margie Dally, cello; Marj Ingram, guitar; Paulette Lynch, hammered dulcimer; Pat Skinner, mandolin and mandola; Patti Walters, fiddle and melodeon.

"Heartstrings turns every event into a great experience," said Dorothy McEwen of the Holman Ranch, co-chair of the "Great Bowls of Fire" event. "Their music is spirited and joyful."

Tickets for the Chili Cook-Off are $15 each. For reservations or more information, call Ann Olivier at the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce, 659-4000.

The 14th annual Hospice Golf Scramble, benefitting Hospice of the Central Coast, gets underway September 3, 1996 at Carmel Valley Ranch with a 12:30 p.m. shotgun start.

Second only to the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am in terms of dollars raised from a local tournament, the Hospice Golf Scramble over the last 13 years has generated more than $500,000 for Hospice's patient care programs.

The field is limited to the first 155 registered players. A banquet and auction follow the tournament, and the winners of the Pius Cup, honoring the late Chuck Pius, a former Scramble co-chairman, will be announced.

Entry fee is $275 and includes green fees, cart, box lunch, refreshments and buffet dinner.

For reservations, call 642-2035.

Corporate sponsors of the Scramble are PaineWebber and Bank of American Private Banking and Investments.

Hospice of the Central Coast is a home health care provider specializing in the care of people who have life-threatening illness. It also owns and operates Hospice House, an inpatient care center; and Resource Centers in Monterey, Salinas and Hollister.

Pebble Beach Concours D'Elegance

The 1996 Concours D'Elegance will be held at the Lodge at Pebble Beach on August 18. Proceeds will benefit the United Way of the Monterey Peninsula and the Pebble Beach Company Foundation.

The 1996 Concours will celebrate Lincoln as the prewar feature and Zagato as the postwar feature. In addition to an exhibit of Zagato's street and competition cars the Concours will host the US debut of the Zagato Raptor prototype that is powered by a 492 hp Lamborghini V-12 engine.

The Pebble Beach Concours D'Elegance was first held in conjunction with the inaugural Pebble Beach Road Races. The races were discontinued in 1956 when racer Ernie McAfee suffered a fatal accident when, after missing a downshift entering a turn, he hit a tree. The Concours has continued alone and has grown from an exhibition of 30 cars to over 175 today.

Entries in the first Concours were largely limited to British sports and passenger cars. Today's Concours features automobiles ranging from turn-of-the-century antiques to the latest imports, prototypes and concept cars. Promises! Promises!

When the Clinton-Gore administration took over the White House we "greens" (that's environmentalists) were elated. Hadn't Clinton proclaimed, repeatedly, his concern for the environment? And hadn't Al Gore written that excellent book, "Earth in the Balance"?

But perhaps we should recall what every freshman philosophy student learns. Of the seven classic fallacies one is taking the sign for the thing signified ... like trying to eat the pie off the glossy magazine advertisement. It's only a sign ... not tasty at all.

So let's look beyond the signs, glossy as they are ... like well-televised announcements at the Rio Summit, or in the Rose Garden.

Well, not six months in office Clinton caved in to the trinity that despoils our public lands -- the logging, mining, and cattle grazing folk -- and reneged on raising grazing fees. Said an aide to Montana Senator Max Baucus, " ... he just capitulated."

And of course the whole civilized world cares about the whales. But, in violation of the International Whaling Commission's moratorium on commercial whaling, Japan, also in violation of the sanctuary established in the waters around Antarctica, slaughtered 440 Minke whales, up from 330 in 1995, and now seeks a quota of 2400 for 1997.

In December, 1995, the United States Department of Commerce notified Japan that its whaling was in violation of United States law. Enforcement of U.S. sanctions would force both Japan and Norway to halt illegal whaling activities.

But Clinton refused to implement the law against illegal whaling activities. Instead he sent a "strong protest" to Japan expressing U.S. "displeasure" at continued violation of both international law and U.S. law.

Now Japan is preparing to start slaughtering one of the most endangered of all species, the Blue whale.

And what of the Clinton-Gore vow to "reduce our emissions of greenhouse gases to their 1990 level by the year 2000"?

The plan included a deficit reducing energy tax, and increased gasoline taxes up to 20 cents a gallon. But a little lobbying by the National Association of Manufacturers and lo, we have a five cents a gallon gasoline tax, giving America the lowest fuel prices in the developed world, with any thoughts of alternative energy sources dead in the water.

The sad list goes on. The European Economic Community voted to ban the importation of skins from animals trapped in steel-jaw leghold traps, but the Clinton administration has joined with Russia and Canada in threatening an appeal to the World Trade Organization calling the ban "in restraint of trade."

Actually the American fur industry, which Vice President Gore says would be damaged, employs all of 700 in processing fur products, and about two thousand earning their living hunting and trapping.

And there's logging in ancient forests, importing pcbs for incineration in the U.S., support for the increased use of methyl bromide, lifting the 30 year ban on the exportation of Alaskan crude oil, probably guaranteeing the opening of the Alaska National Wild Life Refuge to oil drilling, etc, etc.

The big "greens", the environmental organizations, have apparently gone along with the Clinton administration because they feel they have no where else to go. The Republicans?

But now we have choices. There's the Reform Party of Ross Perot and ex-Gov. Lamm, and there's the Greens Party with Ralph Nader.

Now there is a genuine, dyed-in-the-wool, tried and tested environmentalist and with total integrity. We might do worse.

Davi - Fort Ord Reuse Plan Goes Too Far

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Reuse Plan goes too far. I am very concerned about the recommendations set forth in the Fort Ord Reuse Authority's "Final Base Reuse Plan". As an active member of the community, I became involved with the Fort Ord closure after its announcement in the early 1990s. As a member of the Mayor's Economic Development Task Force for the City of Marina, I participated in and attended many meetings and workshops on the Fort Ord closure and its reuse. These meetings and workshops were put on by the Fort Ord Reuse Group (FORG). FORG was the entity created in the early 90s that ultimately gave birth to the findings of the newly released "Final

WHAT'S NEXT? Mel Vercoe

As I write this, a lot of nice people are excited about our President coming to Salinas to tell us and millions of tv watchers nationwide, about some money we'll get from our national Treasury to fight crime in Salinas, which should give hope to everybody in the U.S. Yes, it's a presidential election year, and Salinas could use the money, and Salinas is lucky that the President's Chief of Staff is from Monterey County.

But, the election is already in the bag. That money could have been kept in Washington, to be used for something really important, maybe supplies for our troops in Bosnia, or to help keep Arabs out of Jerusalem, or to fund a study to find out if life existed on Mars several billion years ago. The Democrats don't need any more votes.

Long, long ago, one of the reasons for people to come to America was to get away from governments dominated by religions, but, guess what, in November we'll have just one candidate, from just one political party who will have a chance, thanks to religions getting into the political act. The opposition party has allowed itself to be dominated by such a non-political issue as a woman's right or non-right to terminate an unwanted or unaffordable pregnancy.

So, in effect, we are back to the sort of dominance that people left Europe to get away from. It's too bad. With all of our other problems, the country going broke, along with programs like Social Security, unlimited immigration, an unworkable criminal justice system, ad infinitum, we sure could have done without religious beliefs wiping out our rights to have plain elections, free from abortion issue litmus tests.

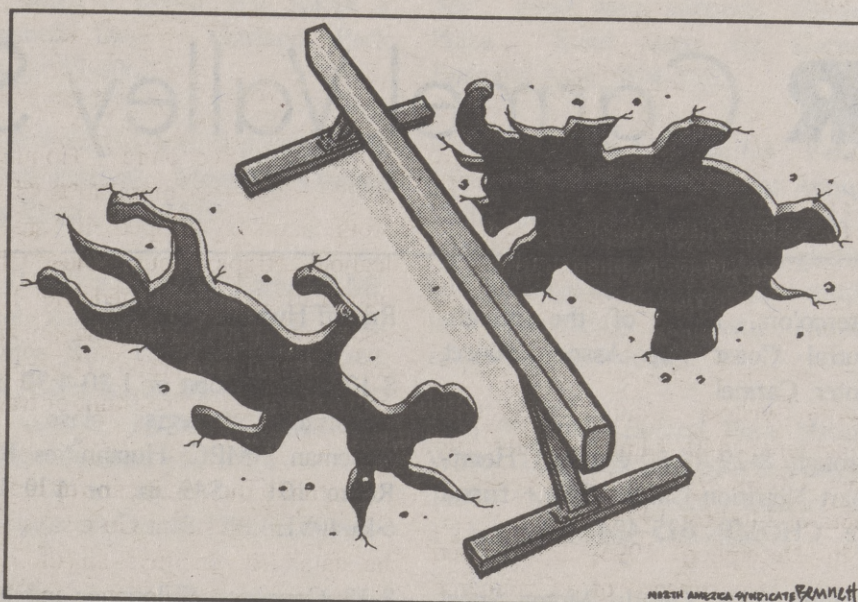

Base Reuse Plan" by the Fort Ord Reuse Authority. Joseph Cavanaugh was hired by FORG to help create the Base Reuse plan. Several years of work consisting of many meetings, workshops and public input resulted in initial drafts of a reuse plan.

I recall these drafts being released and immediately being revised because the public reaction was that the plan described too much development. The reuse plan was updated several times, each time being pared down in an effort to gain public acceptance. After the creation of the Fort Ord Reuse Authority (FORA) by state legislation, the work of FORG was then handed over to FORA. This "Final Base Reuse Plan" is the culmination of those years of work since the announcement of the base closure.

Unfortunately, the "Final Base Reuse Plan" still goes too far. I am still reviewing the 4 volumes which include an Environmental Impact Report, Business Plan, and the Base Reuse Plan Volume 1 and 2. This document is huge and its impact to the Central Coast is enormous. The loss of Fort Ord basically took away the largest component of Monterey County's economy. The effects have been felt in all the surrounding communities.

The goal for Fort Ord reuse should be to replace the economic impact lost by the exodus of the military, not to invite unbridled growth and development for the sake of profit with no concern for the environment and preservation of our quality of life. I believe FORA is going too far with their plan which could potentially realize over 70,000 people on the base as compared to the former population of approximately 30,000. FORA should focus on a reasonable, less aggressive plan which will ultimately replace what was lost in the way of the economic impact and population at Fort Ord. FORA must acknowledge the natural constraints of resources such as water and infrastructure and public demand that will control all future developments at Fort Ord.

I encourage the citizens of Monterey County to take an active role in the "Final Base Reuse Plan". The only way to do that is to contact the Fort Ord Reuse Authority and obtain an "Executive Summary" of the plan (or purchase the entire 4 volumes for $120.) and prepare written comments which you can present to the Fort Ord Reuse Authority directly. This may be the only opportunity for the public to comment on this Reuse

The Balanced Budget Beam

Plan and be able to change its contents.

The Fort Ord Reuse Authority is a governing body set up by State Legislation (SB899) and the individuals serving on this board are indirectly accountable to the voters only through their respective cities or county they represent. The residents of Monterey County, and more specifically, the Monterey Peninsula, have to take an active role and comment on this "Reuse Plan" to their elected officials that serve on FORA, as well as to FORA itself.

The impacts of this proposal will be realized over the next three decades and the impacts will be permanent on this Peninsula. Please get involved by sending comments and concerns yourself so that we can preserve our quality of life and ensure that "San Jose-like" development does not take place at Fort Ord.

Regional Park District Honors Ken Principe

At their monthly meeting on August 5, 1996, the Board of Directors of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District honored Ken Principe of Carmel Valley for his outstanding ten years of volunteer work in a leadership role in the establishment and development of the Cachagua Community Park.

Mr. Principe was instrumental in establishing site acquisition proposals, development plans, and the children's center. He served on the first Board of Directors of the Cachagua Community Park Board and the children's center subcommittee. Mr. Principe's volunteer hours, toward realizing a community gathering place for youth and adult activities for the community of Cachagua, have totaled thousands over the past ten years. He was honored as a role model for community activism and spirit that have improved the quality of life for the community of Cachagua and Princess Camp.

In other news, the District agreed to accept a two million dollar no-interest loan from the Coastal Conservancy for use in acquiring vacant lots in the Sand City coastal dunes south of Tioga Road.

Volunteer Training at Aquarium

The Monterey Bay Aquarium is looking for a few good guides, and has scheduled an information meeting on Tuesday, August 20, 1996 at 7 p.m. in advance of a guide training session planned in September.

Attendance at the information meeting in the aquarium auditorium is a requirement for anyone who wants to enroll in the four evening apprentice guide training course that will be offered from September 23-26.

Apprentice guides will start working with the public this fall, after completion of the four 3 hour sessions. Apprentice guides are especially needed for weekday shifts.

Volunteer guides learn about Monterey Bay's natural history, general history of the region and interpretive techniques. They also receive regular marine science updates and other enrichment activities.

Apprentice guides commit to working one weekday shift each week or a weekend shift every other week for three months.

To register, or for additional information, call the aquarium volunteer office at 648-4867.

Douglas Pease

Our trip to the 1996 Olympics not only gave us a first hand view of our daughter receiving the gold medal for her part in the U.S. Synchronized Swimming Team competition, it also reminded us of the extent to which the tv camera lenses shape our view of events.

For example, the archery event was a garden party ... a beautiful expanse of green lawn striped into six fifty-meter lanes with a target at the end of each lane. Two archers, the finalists, stepped up to the line, fired an arrow, awaited the score, awaited the opponent's attempt and score, and after three shots took a break while the judges ambled to the targets to retrieve arrows and confirm the scores. It was all very elegant and leisurely, and we chatted with people around us ... the archery coach and the family of our American champion. Within an hour, there was another break to set up the medal ceremony stands on the lawn, we stood for the National Anthem, applauded our young American with his ponytail and mirror sun glasses, and then we strolled out of the stands to board a bus to take us out of the park and return us to our car at the parking lot downtown. It was a very pleasant outing in the country.

Television viewers saw a different story. Three cameras, one on an elbowed boom at the edge of the lawn, another mounted to slide on a low bar in front of the firing line, and a third aimed at the targets, shaped the event into an intense struggle between adversaries on a battlefield. Tv editors compressed the event into an orchestrated series of shots slamming into the target, followed by personal background on our American champion and then his triumphant wave from the medal stand. Not a hint of a garden party or the park setting or of the real nature of the sport that afternoon.

At the synchro final event, tv viewers only saw two teams swim. We spectators watched the world's eight top teams swim programs they had rehearsed for months. Tv viewers saw the huge aquatics venue, but not Nathan's Junkyard and the Cajun

Kitchen we spectators passed on the way in. Tv viewers got a better show, up close and personal. But it wasn't the whole story.

What does this have to do with investing? I, for one, will pay closer attention to cable company stocks from now on, because these companies are indeed shaping the world we see into a better show.

COMPUTER TALK

Val Healey

Part 23 - An introduction to computers at a naively simple level

In the last part we looked briefly at how information is displayed on a monitor; the display is made up of small dots each of which is formed with "guns" that project a beam on the inner surface of the tube. All of the colors that the monitor can display are generated by varying the amounts of red, green, and blue in each dot. This color display can be fonts or some kind of object such as a picture, or image as it is often called, and it is on the latter that we will now focus.

There are professional level computer "paint" programs available that are used to generate pictures or images and these usually cost hundreds of dollars but almost all the gui operating systems have a simplified one. These allow one to make diagrams of circles, squares, rectangles, straight lines, and curves, all of different thicknesses and colors. Closed areas may be "filled" with a particular color and other regions may be painted using a simulated spray can. Text in different colors may be embedded anywhere in the picture and parts of the picture may be erased or copied and pasted somewhere else. This truly is painting without getting your hands dirty and, of course, the picture may be modified endlessly without any build-up of paint. These programs often have a "view" facility which allows one to zoom in on a small part of the picture and, in doing this, one soon realizes that the picture is really made up of many small squares. If we were to look at the screen through a magnifying glass we may see that these squares have several of the dots, which we described in the first paragraph above, both across the width and up along the vertical side. A pixel is usually defined as the smallest segment of an image that we can independently control, so these little squares are the pixels; indeed we can change the color of any individual pixel at will. A screen whose resolution has been set to 800 x 600 has 800 pixels along the horizontal and 600 up the vertical. The numbers of dots per pixel can vary from one to quite a few, depending on the quality and settings of the video card and monitor.

Now, unfortunately, things become complicated when we want to print an image or text. We have to set the resolution on the printer at something like 200 dpi, 300 dpi, 600 dpi, etc. The dpi here means dots per inch and obviously the higher the resolution setting the more detail will be shown on the printed page. Unfortunately, the dots referred to here are not the same as the dots on the screen but instead correspond to the pixels. When dealing with scanners these dots or pixels are often called "samples" and spi is used instead of dpi.

If we have an image on the screen we can easily calculate the total number of pixels that form it by multiplying the number of horizontal pixels by the number of vertical ones. Suppose we have an image whose pixels are either black or white; we can call one color 0 and the other one 1 and the one bit can "describe" the two colors (0, 1). Extending this to other colors, we can say that two bits describe four colors (00, 01, 10, 11), three bits describe 65,536, and 24 bits just over 16 millions. {For you math whiz-kids, 2 to the power of the number of bits equals the number of colors}. When we say "describe" a color here we really mean that it provides a tag or descriptor that we can associate with that color. To find the total "amount" of information in an image we multiply the width by the height, which is the total number of pixels, by the numbers of bits/pixels, which is called the color "depth". The result is the total number of bits for the image.

In the next part we will look at color "depth" and will see the prodigious amounts of information that a color picture has, or the huge storage space that we have to provide for color graphics and even for monochrome graphics that have "greyscales."
